The Morning Star returned to port yesterday in a leaky condition. She was unable to finish her cruise on that account. The leak is on both sides near the keel, and is supposed to be caused by the worms, which have eaten through pieces of planking in places where the copper was torn off, when she grounded last year. She was beached on the island of Kusie, and the leak repaired as well as possible to enable her to return to port. She will be hove down here and repaired, and will sail again in about three weeks to finish her cruise.
